

In Celebration of Disneylands
Original Date Nite
Be Our Guest is Proud to announce
Guest of Honor
Adrienne Brown-Norman

Adrienne Brown was born in Omaha Nebraska and for as long as she can remember she's always had a love of music, history and art. Unable to attend art school, Adrienne provided her own art education by visiting museums, art galleries and studying the work of the masters both historical and contemporary. When her first marriage ended, Adrienne decided on a move to Los Angeles in the hope of getting work in the entertainment business. She worked as a pastel portrait artist for over 30 years.

However, without college credentials, her job searches failed to bear fruit and her art future looked bleak. While taking night art classes, her work came to the attention of a local art director. Impressed by her talent and work ethic, Adrienne was soon offered a job in the theme park company.

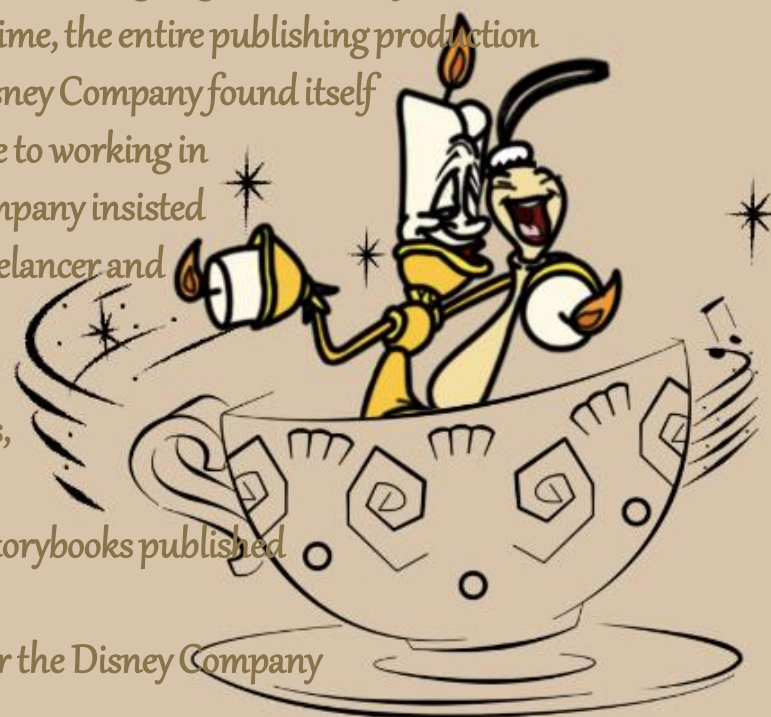

In time, that work led to a two year stint in Tokyo Japan where she continued her work as a set designer for Landmark Entertainment, designing attractions for Sanrio. Returning to the states, Adrienne Brown arrived at the Walt Disney Company to provide technical assistance to the publishing department which was then undergoing a transition from traditional illustration to digital. In time, the entire publishing production pipeline would be digital and the Disney Company found itself lacking in artists who were adaptable to working in both mediums. Soon, the Disney Company insisted Adrienne give up her position as, freelancer and begin working for the company as a full time employee.

Today, Adrienne has been with the Walt Disney Company for 26 years, freelancing included.

She has been working as an illustrator and art director on the many storybooks published by Disney Publishing Worldwide.

Today, Adrienne Brown continues to be an important creative asset for the Disney Company and her work is enjoyed by readers the world over.
